Despite New Lawson Raid, the Stock Market Was Optimistic at Close of Year.

THE JANUARY REINVESTMENTS

Fetich With Which Wall Street Conjures Annually-Good Year in Prospect.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Despite a dash of cold water thrown in the face of speculative Wall Street by Thomas W. Law-son in the closing days of the week, the interval was one of cheerfulness in the financial district. The usual year-end opti-mism prevailed. Pool and clique operators set about marking up prices in anticipation of the January reinvestment demand, and doubliess some genuine investors an-ticipated the investor of speculative pro-clivities by realizing on securities. Doubt-to some one more credulous than himself.

January Reinvestments.

At a time of annual accounts and settlements, investing institutions, business men, manufacturers and wealthy individuals are all engaged with something of greater importance than speculative stocks. They are casting up accounts and striking balances. The pools and cliques have practically an open field, with little to fear that any of the "great interests will disturb their operations. In one respect, in fact, the financial institutions assist the performance.

If the first place, they are not unwilling to see the inventory values of their securities marked up, for it enables them to make better showings. As they are working on schedules which in many cases they are reluctant to disturb, they are inclined to stay their lands from solling. In other words, a technical position favorable to a manipulative advance is created at the year's end, and the result is further favored by the knowledge that huge sums of money are to be disbursed in dividends and interest.

In many cases the expected "January reinvestment" demand, that fetten with which speculative Wall Street conjures and speculative Wall Street conjures and speculative Wall Street has been lost in wonder over what became of all the money. The explanation is simple the money. The explanation is simple persons in the committy. They have wealth, therfood wall. Street has been not fact—investors and investment of fact—investors and investment of act—investors and investment of the money. The explanation is simple persons in the committy. They have wealth, therfood wall street has been obtained some of the fact and may be summed up in a brief statement of act—investors and investment for sighted persons in the committy. They have wealth, therfood materials in the committy of the sighted persons in the committy. They have wealth, therfood materials in the committy of the sighted persons in the committy of the sighted persons in the committy. They have wealth therefore more the dead of the sighted brief, and who in the glamor of sharp dyances, were likely to forget past performances in the stock market, the heavy attendant losses and the scandals. Without doubt the influence of the Lawson form of campaign will pass away in time, and the speculative market will rid itself of this inecubis. It is not pleasant to have to refer in any way to such a feature it connection with a consideration of one of the world's great inancial markets. Bill it cannot be denied that Mr. Lawson's utterances possess a real potency in the speculative department of the market at this time. They do not impair values one to the content of the market at this time. They do not impair values one to the content of the market at this time. They do not impair values one to the industry has reawakened and shows improvement; bask clearances expand, railway carnings increase and money continues abundant and obtainable at low rates. No single fundamental factor which is favorable is in any way altered by outpenrings from Boston. Yet that they have distribed the speculative market is undeniable. That there must be some reason for this cannot be doubted, for, if not, the attuck would be barren of

The following table of internal revenue collections: for the year, prepared by Deputy Collector Robert McCandlish, shows the collections per month for 1904 and comparison with 1903 on beer, spirits, cigars, cigarettes, tobacco, etc. With total collections of nearly $2,324,822, the decrease, compared with 1903, amounts to a little more than $20,000 due chiefly to the decrease in the output of cigars. THEE DISPENSARY.

The first year of the Raleigh dispensary has ended, and the receipts almost reach $180,000, this being much more than was expected. Of the profits, the net amount is $6,000, half of which goes to the county, the other half to the city, most of it being devoted to the public schools. The net result is more than five times as great as the license and other taxes which were derived from the twenty-eight places in the city last year, which sold liquor. Westey N. Jones, the chairman of the dispensary board, is one of the most prominent Baptists in Raleigh, and widely known in that denomination. He is considerate and stud. They work very hard for the dispensary, which they consider fair preferable to the bar room.

The determination of the farmers in regard to holding their cotton crops until they see what is planted this year is something really remarkable. In the course of conversations with a number of leading farmers your correspondent has gathered the information that the larger ones will back the smaller—that is, help them through, The determination of the business public not to furnish supplies to cotton growers who violate the agreement to reduce the acreage and the amount of commercial fertilizer twenty-five per cent. Will have a powerful effect, for, despite the fact that a very large proportion of the growers to not have to have advances made, on their crops by merchants, there are a number who still require this help, owing to their improvidence very largely, and the action taken is designed to reach these. In no other way could this class of farmers be reached so directly.

There is a very lively fight on here for the speakership of the lower house of the Legislature. Four aspirants are in the field among these being the son of the late Governor and Secretary of the United States Navy, William A. Graham. The friends of all the aspirants are very confident of the success of their man.
